TRYING TO SAVE LECONY.
(SPECIALLY FOR THE EVENING WORLD.)
CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 10.—The friends of Chalkley Lecony, the farmer accused of murdering his niece, Annie Lecony, in his farmhouse near Merchantville, on the morning of Sept. 9, are working in earnest now to save his neck from the rope.
The evidence against him was submitted to the Camden County Grand Jury yesterday, and after a very short deliberation that body indicted him for murder in the first degree by a unanimous vote.
Jarrett Murray, Frank Lingco, Dr. Isaac, Billy Smith, and an unknown woman, furnished the testimony to the Grand Jury.
Lecony's friends were surprised, as they hoped for a disagreement at least.
The ablest legal talent will be employed to defend him.
The trial is expected to begin the latter part of this month.

HELP WANTED—FEMALE.
WANTED—Ladies to know Professor Livingston, 616 Broadway, New York. Grand opening this week, the latest and finest assortment of patterns ever brought to this country, and the only place where the minutest of French dress cutting, making, lasting, finishing, tacking, designing, matching plaids and stripes, double and single French bias under arm, two darts above and one below; tight fitting waists without darts, Directorate coats, house-wrappers; in fact, every style of garment, every shape and curve of a lady's form taken correctly by measure; no guesswork or settling. I have the largest school in the world for instructing ladies in cutting, having now 157 pupils taking instruction. I cannot supply the demand for dressmakers, using my French system; teach more pupils, furnish more and better positions than all the teachers in New York combined. Mothers, bring or send your daughters; they can learn more in two weeks than in any dressmaking establishment in five years. Several good positions now ready. Send for circular.
